Whether it's a bubbling urn to greet guests in your entryway, a stunning Koi pond, or a pondless waterfall cascading over natural stone in the garden, today's homeowners have more options than ever to add the magical allure of water to their outdoor landscapes. "Water features are extremely popular," says Jamie Ori, president of Rosebrook Pools in Libertyville. "And they'll continue to grow because they add a focal point and gathering place in a yard."

In fact, today's water features not only offer a limitless variety of prices, styles, and sizes, but thanks to always-evolving technology, they now offer more conveniences for maintenance and cost-effective systems, as well. With the touch of a remote or LCD screen, water displays, lighting, and even the quality of sound, can be controlled to suit your need-du-jour.

But before adding that special splash to your landscape, it helps to know which options best meet your needs. Naperville Magazine recently met with area professionals to talk about the latest trends in fountains, waterfalls, ponds, and pools.
